The Background

Cura Energy's LiveEye advanced energy management platform is providing a multi-site office client with automated quarterly energy reporting. This gives senior management clearer visibility of energy usage trends across their estate.

Our Client required regular reporting to better understand patterns of energy consumption across several office spaces throughout the year. A key requirement was that the reports needed to be clear, relevant and easily understood by senior managers who were not energy specialists.

The Cura Energy Approach

Our team installed energy sub-metering within the client's premises to provide greater visibility of energy consumption across the estate. Using this data, we developed bespoke energy performance reports tailored to the Client's specific operational and reporting requirements.

The reports included simplified summaries and graphical illustrations designed for presentation and discussion at quarterly board meetings. To streamline the reporting process, the reports were fully automated and distributed directly to senior managers in advance of each meeting.

The Result

The reporting process gave the client greater visibility of energy performance trends and supported more informed decision-making at board level. This delivered:

- Clear and accessible energy reporting for non-technical stakeholders.
- Improved visibility of energy usage patterns across multiple office locations.
- Automated quarterly reporting delivered directly to senior managers.
- Better-informed energy management priorities and decision-making.
- Ongoing performance tracking to support continuous improvement initiatives.
